

NIFTY SPOT : IMMEDIATE SUPPORT AT 24000-23860

Source – TradingView, BP Equities Research

The benchmark index closed Friday at 24,176, up 85 points, snapping the two session run of bearish marubozu candles with a constructive session that opened at 24,123, dipped to a low of 24,077 that held well above the 24,000 support, then rallied to a high of 24,188 and closed near the top of the range with only a small upper wick. Despite the recovery, the close remains below the 50 DMA, keeping Wednesday's breach of that average unresolved, and MACD line stays negative for a second straight session, though the histogram has widened to 23 as it narrows the gap toward signal. RSI's fast line at 47 remains below its own slow average at 49, a bearish alignment even as price itself firmed up, a lag worth watching for confirmation. Volume eased from Thursday's, meaning Friday's bounce came on lighter participation than the breakdown it is trying to repair. A close back above the 50 DMA would be the first real sign this two session slide has been fully absorbed, while a fresh low below 24,077 would reopen the 24,000 support as the next test.

BANKNIFTY SPOT : IMMEDIATE SUPPORT 57000-56500

Source – TradingView, BP Equities Research

The banking index closed Friday essentially flat at 57,496, down 14 points, though the session again showed a defended dip, opening at 57,430, sliding to a low of 57,264, then rallying to a high of 57,596 before settling back near the open, a hammer like structure with a lower shadow well exceeding the upper wick, the same pattern that has repeatedly shown up on down days this month. The close remains below the 50 DMA for a second session but holds above the 200 DMA, keeping that average the deeper support anchoring this range. MACD line held with the histogram at 56, staying above signal, a steadier momentum picture than the choppy price action alone suggests. RSI's fast line eased while the slow average sits just above at 51, a marginal bearish alignment but far less pronounced than the one seen in the benchmark index. Volume eased from Thursday's, consistent with a defended low rather than fresh selling pressure. With the broader tape stabilizing after two heavy sessions, the reclaimed 50 DMA remains the level to watch for the range to resolve higher.
